

G is for Guns. Forts have lots of guns, and the Old Stone Fort has plenty to show what people used to defend themselves for centuries.

During the American Revolution, soldiers used flintlock muskets and rifles that fired lead balls. The musket was quick loading and a bayonet could be fixed on it, which made it a very good military weapon- but it was not very accurate. The rifle was actually made for hunting, so it was made to be more accurate. Loading was slower, though, and a bayonet could not fit on it.
